

On the Line:

People... Places... Planes

By BOB CONSIDINE

CPYRGHT

THREE U-2 Reconnaissance jets were observed flying in close formation over Cape Canaveral recently. Probably practicing how to take three-dimensional photographs from 68,000 feet.

The sight of these sharp-nosed glider-like craft moved one Air Force man, who is in a position to know, to remark. "Because of the U-2 we have better aerial maps of Russia than the Russians have. The U-2 rendered a great and much needed service. I hope we're using them to keep tabs on what's happening in Red China, Cuba and a couple other places."

We probably are doing just that.

Reared Headline Service